- The water treatment plant
- The east side sewage lift station

The water treatment plant is going to lose power on Monday, Wednesday and Thursday. When the water treatment plant loses power, water is no longer being added to the water distribution system. People at the top of the hill will see an almost immediate loss of water. As you go further down the hill people will have water at reduced pressure for a while. With a loss of pressure in the distribution system the concern is with ground water and backflow infiltrating the distribution system. While the power is out to the water treatment plant, please use the minimum water possible.

When the east side lift station is without power, the Village will have a sucker truck at the east side lift station to transport waste to the sewage lagoon. This lift station services the people living east of John street. We ask that that a minimum possible amount of sewage be discharged to the east side lift station when it has no power.

Please note that the Precautionary Drinking Water Advisory is still in effect.
